Harvest time

The grapes are ripening on the vines and the season's harvest is gearing up in local vineyards. Last week at a vineyard on Haven Avenue in Rancho Cucamonga pickers were pulling fruit from the vines and loading it onto trucks for a trip to a winery. At left, Ventura Via Fuente adds to the growing pile of recently harvested Zinfandel grapes.

Hospitals try to catch up with valley's growth

By Kathy Betts

Nearly all of the area's hospitals are reflecting the valley's population explosion with major expansion projects in the works or near completion.

Expanded services generally are slated for maternity, emergency or intensive care with modern equipment and medical treatments part of the package, hospital officials say.

Chino Community Hospital is waiting for state approvals before it opens its $4.7 million project; a 10-bed addition to its eight-bed intensive care unit; and a 10-bed maternity wing.

The 17-year-old hospital, which is undergoing its first major expansion project, has never offered maternity care before, said public relations director Patti Aguiar.

"The average age in Chino is 28, so we do see a definite need in the community (for maternity care)," said Charleen Krueger, the director of the maternity ward.

Special beds will overcome the need to move patients into separate rooms for labor, delivery and recovery, and most babies could remain in the mother's room until they both are released.

Doctors' Hospital of Montclair also is looking into expanding its labor and delivery services, said administrator Britt Berrett.

"There's an explosion in the baby business in the area. This time last year we had 150 babies. Last month we had 270," Berrett said. "Expansion will concentrate on women's and children's services."

The affiliated Ontario Community Hospital just underwent "a major facelift," Berrett said, but it did not entail an expansion of the facility.

Ontario primarily offers medical and surgical services, but does not provide maternity care, he said.

The Carnegie Building in Upland is slated for restoration.

Carnegie Building to be restored and used as area heritage center

By Kathy Betts

Upland plans to restore the now-vacant, 76-year-old Carnegie Building as a heritage center adjacent to City Hall.

The city's local history collection — consisting of newspaper clips, photos, government documents, books and manuscripts — now sits in a library storage room, making it "rather inaccessible to the public," library director Linda Yao said.

In a recent report to the City Council, she said the primary purpose of restoring the 5,400-square-foot Carnegie Building is to give the community access to Upland's heritage and history.

The council recently followed the library board's recommendation to open the future heritage center to the public and manage it through the library department.

The council also agreed to spend $50,000 to hire a preservation architect to draw designs to follow in renovating the structure and bringing it up to current safety standards.

A citizen committee also will be formed to raise funds to pay for the renovation, the council agreed.

Planning Director Jeff Bloom has said the estimated cost to bring the building up to earthquake codes would be about $660,000. Last November, the council slated $150,000 in city reserves in

Board candidates cut it real close

6 more vie for school positions

By Natalie Shore

At the 11th hour, six challengers added their names to the list of candidates running for school boards in three local districts.

The filing period for eight races had been extended until 5 p.m. Aug. 16 because at least one incumbent in each district decided not to run again. At the last minute, more candidates filed for the Nov. 7 race in the Chino Unified, Mount Baldy Joint and Upland Unified school districts.

County Registrar of Voter officials announced the final candidates list Aug. 17 for the extended races.

- Central — Four candidates are running for three seats: Incumbents Andrew B. Taylor and Debbie Baker as well as retired educator Dolores Russell and firefighter Michael S. Eagleson have filed.

A special election to fill a two-year term is unnecessary because Richard A. Musser was the only candidate who filed for the vacancy. He will replace his wife, Ruth Musser, who died in May.

- Chino Unified — Six candidates are running for two seats: incumbent Donna Silva as well as insurance agent David Neal Chamberlain, program manager Eugene D. Rossel, education consultant Earl P. Owens and businessmen Gary G. Larson and Tim Irwin.
- Etiwanda — Five candidates are running for three seats: incumbents Marty Pruitt and Gary Raymond Collins as well as economic development consultant Jeff Young, high school teacher Roy E. Ottesen and Andy Solorzano.
- Mount Baldy Joint — Three candidates are running for two seats: engineer Larry A. Murdock, bookeeper M. Ann Jones and teacher Jeannine Schaefer-Dole.
- Pomona Unified — Seven candidates are running for three seats: incumbent Linda M. Stevens as well as former Pomona superintendent Timothy Graves, businessman Chaim Magnum, engineer Cleve Holifield, attorney Robert S. "Bob" Preece, social worker Linda D. Wright and Spanish language newspaper publisher Candelario J. "Cande" Mendoza. Mendoza is a former Pomona school board member.
- Upland Unified — Eight candidates are running for five seats: incumbents Michael Varela, Barbara Ryan, Kegham Tashjian and President P. Joseph Lenz as well as attorney Brian Brandt, school psychologist Moana Plotkin, police officer Jim Woolum and marketing specialist Lynn Francisco-Casella. Brandt, Plotkin, Woolum and Francisco-Casella are all former Upland Unified candidates.
- Walnut Valley Unified — Five candidates are running for three seats: incumbent Helen Hall as well as law office administrator Mari L. Collins, travel agent Kathleen "Kitty" Fritz, Marsha Sykes and college instructor Larry Redinger.
- San Bernardino County Board of Education — Two candidates are running for one regional seat: former Ontario-Montclair school trustee Rose B. Kelber and former Chaffey High principal David O. Stine, now a Cal State San Bernardino professor.

School board elections will be held Nov. 7 in 14 out of the region's 18 school districts. The filing period on six of the local races closed Aug. 11 because all incumbents are trying to keep their seats. Incumbents are being challenged in the Alta Loma, Chaffey Joint Union High, Claremont Unified, Fontana Unified, Mountain View and Ontario-Montclair school districts.

Elections were canceled in four local districts because no challengers filed to unseat incumbents.

White insects invade

By Peggy Olsen

White ash flies and eggs cover the underside of leaf.

Pomona resident Yvonne Pavlakes brushed against a tree in her yard and unleashed a swarm of tiny, fuzzy whiteflies.

Three weeks later the tree leaves are turning brown and cars parked underneath are sticky with sap.

Pavlakes' discovery of the minute pests that sap strength from healthy leaves was not unique.

Agriculture officials say switchboards are flooded with calls from frustrated residents, all concerned about an infestation of ash whiteflies sweeping through the region.

"Our telephones are ringing off the hook. This thing is sweeping like wildfire into the Pomona-San Bernardino-Riverside area," said Chester Olson, supervising agricultural inspector for the Los Angeles County Department of Agriculture.

The tiny insect poses a particularly complicated problem because it was brought into the U.S. from Europe and has no "natural enemies" here, Olson said. "Basically, it zaps strength from trees by sucking juice out of the leaves," he added.

Currently, officials say there is no effective insecticide to curb the infestation. And importing "natural enemies" from Europe may take up to six years and more than $700,000.

Meanwhile, homeowners, the nursery industry and producers can do little except water trees well, said Eldon Reeves, staff entomologist for the Agriculture Commissioner in Riverside County.

"Most plants can tolerate at least three years of partial defoliation. Not all leaves are going to drop if there is periodic deep soaking of trees," Reeves said. But he conceded "there will be some toll."

Two entomologists at the University of California, Riverside, have received grants to search for a "natural enemy" of the insect that attacks a wide variety of trees, including citrus, pear, apple, ash, peach, apricot, plum and olive.

Entomologists Tom Bellows and Tim Paine will oversee the first phase of a biological control program beginning next month to import and establish a predator. Research into the biology of the European insect and the possibility of short-term insecticidal control also is planned.

The tiny whiteflies can't be eradicated with pesticides because their population growth is so rapid, said Bellows, an expert in whitefly control.

Finding a natural enemy and importing it for distribution in the U.S. is a complicated and time-consuming process, he said. "But it (ash whitefly) does have more than a half dozen natural enemies in Europe. We'll beat it. It's just a question of when," Bellows said.

Meanwhile, Pavlakes is incensed by the prospect of a long wait for natural eradication of the insects she believes are destroying her trees and plants.

She faces losing a 75-year-old evergreen tree, several pomegranate trees and other plants in her yard. Already, two shrubs have shriveled and died, she said.

"Something needs to be done even if it's spraying like for the Medfly. If we have to wait for years for a solution, we may not have any trees to worry about. The leaves are defoliated all over the yard," she said.

Rancho Cucamonga resident Gwen Barnes shares Pavlakes' concern.

Like the Pomona homeowner, she discovered the pests when she bumped into some leaves and sent a white-winged swirl streaming into the air.

"So far, I don't see any leaves curling," she said. "But it's starting to get little webby things in places."

Barnes, an employee of Rancho Santa Ana Botanic Gardens in Claremont, said she understands deep

Chino ride group

The Chino Rancho Ride Association continued with its tradition of community service awards last week. It presented a check on behalf of senior citizens of Chino to the Senior Citizens' Foundation of San Bernardino County. The group is a non-profit orgaization of senior citizens.

The interest from this fund will be used to furnish services and support for the benefit of present and future senior citizens of San Bernardino County.

The presentation was made at the Chino Senior center by Ed Pine, president of the Chino Rancho Ride Association, and board member Dennis Pine. Accepting the check were foundation board members Doc Williams, Lee Nunes and Gilbert Gonzales.

Trap and skeet shoot

The fifth annual trap and skeet shoot took place recently at Peterson's Prado tiro shooting site. The event raised more than $12,000 to benefit the local chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

More than 200 shooters enjoyed the day of competition and entertainment. Actress Lee Purcell and Olympic medalist Dan Carlisle attended the event and displayed their shooting expertise.

Premium Distributing, 7-Eleven, White Flyer, Sandy's Fast N'Fresh, and Peterson's Publishing were all sponsors of the shoot. Locally, MDA has more than 600 patients.

Dancing not only for young

By Suzanne Sproul

Instructor Louise Pewsey, front, shares exercise tips with members of Upland Community Center.

Louise Pewsey believes no one should slow down simply because of age.

Growing old is no excuse for not participating in life. Even if it's gentle exercise, some is better than none, the Alta Loma woman said.

Pewsey follows what she preaches. Her outlet is dance. It's been a part of her life ever since she was a youngster.

"I had a dancing school with my mother and I've been dancing since I was 5. I think once you're a dancer, you're always a dancer. My mother taught dancing until she was 86," she said.

Pewsey hopes her philosophy about life will rub off to other senior citizens when she teaches her class "In the Mood" next month for the Upland Recreation Department.

Her eyes twinkle and a smile comes easily to her face when she talks about dancing. "I missed not teaching dancing and the recreation department had an opening for teaching seniors. I believe in seniors keeping fit. It has helped me and I think a class like this can help others," she said.

Seniors, those 55 and older, who may be turned off by the idea of a dancing/exercise class needn't worry, she said. There's enough aerobics classes available for people looking for that type of program. Instead, Pewsey said she wants her class to include gentle exercises but concentrate on dancing.

"I want to get them moving on a regular basis. That will keep them pliable. I think teaching dance forms to the seniors will make the class more fun and more socialable," the instructor said.

Convincing seniors that they can participate and have fun probably will be the hardest aspect of her job, she said.

"I just want to get people to try. Once they try I'm sure they'll like it. I want to incorporate some tap dance introduction into the program and some stretching. That will get their feet, ankles and knees moving," she said.

Consulting firm hired to study train terminal

A commission awarded $165,000 to a consulting firm last week to study which of several Southern California sites would be the best terminal for a high-speed bullet train.

The California-Nevada Super Speed Ground Transportation Commission, which hopes to award a contract to a private firm to build a train whisking passengers 300 miles through the desert from Los Angeles to Las Vegas in about 75 minutes, has not settled on which of seven Southern California communities would be the best destination. Ontario is one of the cities being considered.

A West German and a French company are expected to be the prime bidders for the train, which is envisioned as traveling up to 240 mph and providing a less-expensive yet still quick alternative to airline travel.

Las Vegas officials have backed the project as an effective way of bringing gamblers to the city from lucrative Southern California.

Upland council decides to change meeting dates

After no objections at two recent City Council meetings on the proposed ordinance, the Upland City Council will begin meeting in September on the second and fourth Mondays at 7 p.m. rather than the second and fourth Tuesdays.

Mayor Robert Nolan, the former longtime principal of Upland Junior High School, and Councilwoman Donna Vandersall, the former school board president, proposed the meeting change to avoid a conflict with the school district.

watering is the only immediate course of action.

First detected in Van Nuys in July 1988, the ash whitefly spread through the San Fernando Valley and Los Angeles County.

More recently, residents in San Bernardino, Riverside and Orange counties have been plagued by the tiny, destructive creatures.

The search for a predator is being funded with a $38,000 grant.

hopes to obtain another $510,000 in state funding to fully restore the building, yet the city recently learned it was denied a grant.

The library's current historical collection would be expanded at the Carnegie Building to include materials that are written, graphic and audio-visual that "reflect the social, economic and cultural history of Upland."

However, she stressed that "the center will not be a museum and original memorabilia will not be collected unless it falls into those categories."

Some space "could be used by the museum or other community groups for rotating exhibits," she said.

More than 100 library patrons a month now request information or materials from the historical collection, with inquiries ranging from the history of the police and fire departments for local school assignments to photos of Upland landmarks or citizens, which are copied to decorate the inside of businesses, Yao said.

Medical Center is breaking ground this fall on a $110 million expansion.

"Literally by the year 2000, we will double in size. We now have 399 beds and we will be going to over 700," said Laura Elek, the hospital's assistant director of marketing and public relations.

The project's first phase, due for completion in two years, will consist of a woman's center, offering obstetrics, intensive care, nursery, radiology and surgical care, Elek said.

The recently completed three-story Pomona Valley Medical Plaza, located alongside the San Bernardino (10) Freeway, will house physicians formerly located in offices on Nemeha Street, Elek said.

San Antonio Community Hospital in Upland is finishing a new cardio-catherization and open-heart surgery lab, while a two-year project is due to start soon.

The expansion — a two-story addition with a partial third floor — will consist of a 33-bed maternity ward that has 18 rooms equipped for labor, delivery, recovery and after-birth services, so mothers can remain in one place for their stay.

In addition, an eight-bassinet neo-natal intensive care unit and two operating/delivery rooms will be provided, along with 10 more intensive care beds and the oncology unit transferred from the current facility.

Intensive care and coronary services will continue to be provided at San Antonio Community, Coates said.

Teachers praise reading

By Natalie Shore

It could have been a pep rally.

On cue, more than 300 teachers and administrators chanted in rounds to the tune of "Row, Row, Row Your Boat."

Read, read, read a book, the best that you can find. Reading books is lots of fun and helps improve your mind.

Singing out in the spirit of the state Department of Education's new mandate on language arts, educators from 10 local school districts recently crowded into the auditorium of Ontario's Vina Danks School for a second day of workshops on how to teach the revised reading and writing curriculum.

The three-day conference was organized by a consortium of western San Bernardino County school districts.

Children need to have a reason for reading, said education consultant Monica Bartels, who led the group in the improvised ditty composed by her former students.

The keynote speaker, Bartel lectured teachers on strategies for making language arts more meaningful to children.

Studying autobiography is one way to break down reading and writing barriers and instill a sense of purpose in children. By learning about their parents, their grandparents and themselves, students attach more importance to what they are doing, Bartel said.

"We need to make reading and writing connections that are so strong that kids don't want to throw them in the waste basket," she said.

The state Department of Education updates curriculum by subject every seven years. The new English framework stresses integrating all language skills in every exercise rather than separating reading, writing, speaking and listening.

Following the morning speakers, teachers attended workshops on the new textbooks the districts will be using.

As a consortium, the districts jointly review and purchase the new materials, said Karen Neiuber, a curriculum planner for Ontario-Montclair schools and language arts committee chairwoman for the inter-district group.

Alta Loma, Central, Cucamonga, Etiwanda, Mount Baldy Joint, Mountain View, Ontario-Montclair, Chaffey Joint Union High, Chino Unified and Upland Unified school districts are members of the consortium.

Residents: 'When will the dam be done?'

By Kathy Betts

San Antonio Heights homeowners want to know when the noise, the gravel-dumping and the overall danger in their neighborhoods will stop.

Specifically, they want to know when the trucks that are carrying dirt, sand, gravel and rocks from the San Antonio Dam reservoir through their neighborhoods will be finished with their project.

The estimated three-year-long project involves cleaning out the San Antonio Dam to its original flood-capacity level, according to the general contractor hired by the U.S. Army Corp of Engineers.

The company heading the project does not get paid to haul it from the reservoir but makes money by selling the materials.

Meanwhile, the residents living just outside Upland's northern city limits say for six months they have endured everything from rumbling trucks outside their windows for 10 hours a day to near collisions with speeding trucks.

On a tour of the area one day last week, Erne Hoefer of 2456 Mesa Terrace pointed to gouged patches of new black asphalt on Mountain Avenue that had been poured to cover potholes. She and her neighbors, Bert and Naedene Lower, insisted that the 5-ton trailers are destroying their streets.

Marliss Krol, who is trying to sell her $950,000 home at 2451 Mountain Ave., said her four-wheel-drive vehicle's windshield had been pitted from flying gravel while in her driveway. Eileen Nasif of 2410 Mountain said her BMW's windshield had also been pitted on three occasions.

Petitions circulating in the area for about a week captured more than 50 signatures. Petition-instigator Tina Nelson said she hopes that the 300 signatures being sought, together with pictures they've taken and repeated calls to local legislators, will get their problems' resolved.

City officials and county legislators say their hands are tied.

"It's a mess," said Upland Mayor Robert Nolan. "I understand why (the trucks are) speeding because they get paid by the load.

"The U.S. Corps of Engineers told our engineer that they wouldn't let trucks out until 7:30 a.m., but we don't have any say (in whether that is enforced)," Nolan said.

Ironically, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said that unsatisfied residents can petition the City Council or the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors.

"The corps has tried in the past to be as helpful as possible (to the residents). Their problems could be brought up to the board of supervisors or the City Council," said Mary O'Keeffe, a public affairs officer in the federal agency.

"The project has come up previously and we know the residents aren't happy with the hours and the driving habits of truck drivers," O'Keeffe said.

Frank Garrett, who oversees the project for Covina-based Amen Brothers, insisted that three people are sent daily "to keep an eye on the trucks" going up and down Euclid, Mountain and Benson avenues.

"Anyone not obeying local speed limits will lose hauling privileges out of the dam," he said. "Any truck leaking material or oil is not allowed to haul out of the dam. We put a scale in there to make sure (the trucks) are not overloaded ....

"Mountain was not in that good of condition when we began," he continued. "We hired a street sweeper to clean the street (after one spill in May). We don't start until after 7 a.m. ... (but) trying to control trucks is difficult."

County Supervisor Jon Mikels, whose 2nd District includes Upland, said residents have called him to complain about the project.

However, he said, "The Army corps has determined that the dam's floor has to be reduced to restore the dam's holding capacity."
